Among their traveling companions are Count de Montesquieu, who has so largely added to the gaiety of cartoonists, and Signor Pietro Mascagni, the Italian composer, whose attention has been divided between leading his orchestra and parleying with officers of the law, owing to misunderstandings with his managers. There was a profusion of flowers in the suites which had been reserved for the Castellane party, but none of the Gould family was at the pier to see the voyagers off.

Philadelphia Notes.

May 16 is the date set for the annual parade of the Four-in-Hand Club. Members of the club will meet, as usual, on the south side of Rittenhouse Square at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. From there they will drive to St. George's Hill for review, after which they will proceed to the Country Club for dinner. Henry Pratt McKean, the newly elected president, will lead the line, and Edward B. Smith, vice president, will bring up the rear. It is doubtful whether the secretary and treasurer, Colonel Morrell, will be able to take his station as second in line, as at present he is abroad with his wife, who is still quite ill. Several prominent New Yorkers are expected to bring their coaches over for the occasion. The names of Alfred Vanderbilt, Reginald Rives, William Jay, and about half a dozen others have been mentioned. The presence of expert whips would, needless to say, add to the already great interest taken in the parade, which is the fete day of the Four-in-Hand Club.

Mrs. Joseph Drexel gave an informal dinner on Wednesday evening at her country residence at Andalusia, on the banks of the Delaware. It was in honor of Mrs. Drexel's guest, Mrs. Benton. In honor of their daughter, Miss Mary Sloan The first, a theater party at Ford's, followed by a supper, will be given on Wednesday, April 15, and the other, a dance for the younger set, will be an event of Thursday evening, April 16, at the Sloan residence, St. Paul and Eager Streets.

The final cotillon of the Friday Assembly Club will take place on Friday evening of Easter week.

The adornment on an elaborate scale of the east and west terraces of the White House mansion was begun today. One hundred and six bay trees and boxwood bushes imported from Holland will be set along the paved walk on top of the terrace. At the extreme end of each terrace will be placed what is known as a standard—an unusually large tree. About it will be grouped the boxwood bushes, forming a hedge. This will provide a quiet nook at the end of each terrace for the use of the President's family.

The finest two standards will be placed in front of the main entrance to the White House on the coping of the portico. The central space of the coping will be left open so as to retain an unobstructed view of Lafayette Square and Sixteenth Street.

Discussed by O. P. Austin. O. P. Austin, chief of the Bureau of Statistics, delivered an address before the Twentieth Century Club in All Souls Church last night. His subject was "The Importance of the Development of the Tropics." The lecture was illustrated with lantern slides.
